

Peacekeeping Peaceworking

As long as there is war, there will be a need for missions that can restore peace.

For over fifty years, UN peacekeepers have stopped death and destruction in places like Cambodia, El Salvador, Mozambique, and now in East Timor. But it's never easy.

The transition from "peacekeeping" to "peaceworking" is dangerous, as Sierra Leone demonstrates. America always has been committed to UN peacekeeping because it improves our national security.

And, it enables the US to work with other nations to reduce the risk to American lives and cost of going it alone.

Congress and the President should fully fund UN Peacekeeping this year. It's the best way to keep peace working.

1779 Massachusetts Ave., NW, Suite 610 • Washington, DC 20036 • www.betterworldfund.org • For information contact (202) 462-4900

Peacekeeping. A smart investment in security.